This class will take the construction process of a dwelling and break it down from the footings to the ridge cap. We will start with the excavation process including site preparation, then start the construction phase, including footings and foundation, then move upward with the floors, walls and trusses or what is called the framing stage of the dwelling. The class will continue with the next phases of enclosing the dwelling and then the in the last couple of stages we will examine all the different components of a dwelling, windows, doors, cabinets, counters, plumbing, heating, electrical, floor coverings, wood trim, interior finish, many types of materials and costs associated with them. We will also discuss costs of remodeling an existing dwelling. We will construct and cost out different types and qualities of components in a new dwelling and discuss the connection between Quantity, Quality, Layout, Design, Materials and Workmanship.
